What should we not be patient to endure f they command? We rule the noisy world, But they rule us. Then teach them how to guide, And hold the rein with judgment. Their applause May once again restore the quiet reign Of virtue, love, and peace, and yet bring back The blush of soliv, and the shame of vice. My My Lecture ceases--Once again observe Alcanor in his garden; not alone, For Isabel is there. The day declines, And now the falling fun offends them not. i She rears the fainting flow r, and feeds its root. Ye botanists, I cannot talk like you, And give to ev fy plant its name and rank, Taught by Linne; yet I perceiv e in all Or known or unknown, in the garden raised, Or nurtured in the hedge-row or the field, A secret something w.nch deli p.s my eye And meliorates my heart. And much I love To see the fair one bmd the stragglng pink, Cheer the sweet rose, the lupin, and the stock, And lend a staff to the still gadding pea. I cannot count the number of the stars, Nor call them by their names, much less relate What vegetable tribes Alcanor loves, The fair ones rear. 1 will not swell my song, Like you, ye bards of Epop jan fame, With. W ith the proud list of forces led from Greece, Or angels tumbled headlong into...
