Suddenly he touched upon a pathetic strain and in less time that it can be related all who were present were clasping hands and crying like babies. The host and hostess were absolutely paralyzed with grief. Every guest in the room vied with the other in his manifestations of sorrow. Dr. Mathews would not relent, but proceeded in this eloquent strain. Suffice it to say that the company that had gathered together for an occasion of jollity and pleasure broke up like a funeral procession. Drs. Ouchterlony, McMurtry and Wathen of Louisville are authority for this report. It is only given as an illustration of the power of Kentucky eloquence when it decides to let itself out. Dr. Mathews...
